PRESENTATION

Nancy Chennault, Castle Rock-America In Bloom (CR-AIB) coordinator announced that Castle Rock received several national recognitions from America In Bloom (AIB). Chennault recently returned from the America In Bloom National Conference held September 24 – 26th in Holland, Michigan. Chennault noted the city's evaluation from AIB judges was distributed to councilmembers last week. She added the Daily News in Longview also recently recognized city volunteers and youth in several newspaper articles relating to CR-AIB programs.

Chennault stated following their visit to Castle Rock, the AIB judges nominated the city for a special award relating to programs involving youth. As a result, the CR-AIB program was presented with 'Best Program For Engaging Youth 2015'. Chennault read an excerpt from the judge's written comments in support of this award. The judges cited youth programs such as volunteer work at the Senior Center, community gardens, school sponsored 'outside learning projects' such as development of bioswales and a retention pond and horticulture projects supporting the CR-AIB projects. Chennault stated over 12,500 pounds of produce and fruit were donated to the community from the gardens. She added that Castle Rock instructors Ryan Penner and Julia Collins were specifically praised by the judges for their efforts in developing youth programs that integrate into school learning programs. Chennault stated many of these youth programs were introduced six years ago.

At the conference, CR-AIB also was recognized for their floral displays; forty communities were nominated and Castle Rock was in the top three.

Chennault introduced Della Franklin, CR-AIB Bloom Team volunteer. Franklin composed a U-Tube video, which was judged on the following criteria: promoting the community, quality, effectiveness, and showcasing benefit of the American In Bloom program. There were seven entries; several of which had previously won this award. Chennault stated Castle Rock's video was awarded first place and CR-AIB received a $1500 award. The CR-AIB program is totally a volunteer operation, supported by donations and sponsorships. The committee intends to use the award funds for the following:

- purchase banners for each of the exits ($300)
- pay for licensing for another video ($200)
- provide $700 for Della Franklin to do another video
- pay for a community volunteer member to attend the 2016 AIB Symposium

The U-Tube video can be seen on the America In Bloom website, Cowlitz Economic Develop Council website and Facebook page, Castle Rock Chamber website and on the CR-AIB and Castle Rock Community Develop Alliance (CRCDA) Facebook pages.

Chennault said banners commemorating these awards will be placed at the north end of Castle Rock.

Mayor Helenberg stated volunteers are what make our city great. He added it is very big to have youth involved and commended Castle Rock School District and their teachers for their involvement and support.
